published posthumously this incisive work represents the culmination of a career anthropologist's passion for teaching and mentoring with a warm reassuring writing style. Marti describes fieldwork techniques some of which distinguish anthropology from the other social sciences and all of which are relevant and extraordinarily useful to young researchers with limited experience. Her narrative adeptly intertwines the experiences of seasoned anthropologists with those of novices in order to illustrate the various methodological techniques. Starting fieldwork optimizes foundational methods covered in larger works. Further, it exposes readers to additional contours of the fieldwork enterprise such as participant observation in virtual places, museums and archives as field sites, the camera as methodology, photographs as evidence, the importance of note taking and how reflexivity can enhance research. Marti's approach to and treatment of the complexities involved in doing fieldwork including discovering the hidden in plain sight will inspire and boost the confidence of prospective fieldworkers.

One of the most influential and creative scholars in medical anthropology takes stock of his recent intellectual odysseys in this collection of essays. Arthur Kleinman, an anthropologist and psychiatrist who has studied in Taiwan, China and North America since 1968, draws upon his bicultural, multidisciplinary background to propose alternative strategies for thinking about how in the postmodern world the social and medical relate. Writing at the margin explores the border between medical and social problems, the boundary between health and social change. Kleinman studies the body as the mediator between individual and collective experience finding that many health problems for example the trauma of violence or depression in the course of chronic pain are less individual medical problems than interpersonal experiences of social suffering he argues for an ethnographic approach to moral practice in medicine one that embraces the infrapolitical context of illness the responses to it the social institutions relating to it and the way it is configured in medical ethics previously published in various journals these essays have been revised updated and brought together with an introduction an essay on violence and the politics of post traumatic stress disorder and a new chapter that examines the contemporary ethnographic literature of medical anthropology
